PAUL HARVEY
SPEAKS MARCH 29
AT U OF MONTANA

MISSOULA---

Radio newscaster and commentator Paul Harvey will speak March 29 at the University of Montana here during the 81st annual banquet of the Missoula Chamber of Commerce.

The address by Harvey will be presented during the banquet at 7 p.m. March 29 in the Five Valleys Room of the University Center on the Missoula campus.

Harvey, who has been with the American Broadcasting Co. a number of years, lived in Missoula during his early days in radio. He was an announcer for KGVO radio on east Main Street in the 1940s and before that he attended an announcers' school in Seattle.

Weekdays during his broadcast in Missoula Harvey was announcer for a man-on-the-street program near Higgins and Main, downtown. He always opened his broadcasts by saying, "It's a beautiful day in Missoula today!"

Harvey also was somewhat of a daredevil. Once he climbed the concrete chimney of the Old Sugarbeet Factory here and broadcast what he saw to his listeners.

A recipient of eight honorary doctor's degrees, Harvey also is a newspaper columnist. Many of his columns have been printed in the Congressional Record. His radio reports are heard on KYSS now in Missoula.

Cost of attending the banquet March 29 is $10 per person. Reservations may be made by phoning 543-6623. Chester M. Murphy is chairman of the local Chamber of Commerce annual meeting committee.
